The longer I stay here, the sadder I feel for the Polish people who seem to be destined for more suffering. The latest cross takes this form: in the Przemyśl and Lubaczow areas (southeast Poland) the Polish Army under the supervision of Russian officers is forcefully evacuating people from their homes and placing them in barbed-wire enclosed camps. Pregnant women, sick children are all being included in this group. Many of them have to sleep on the ground in all kinds of weather. Ostensibly, they are being evacuated because the Ukrainian underground forces are on a rampage, and, according to our information, will be resettled probably in former Prussia. There is probably much more behind this whole activity. My guess is that they will be used to settle former German territory which I have found in my travels to be sparsely settled, the land lying fallow and unused. Could it be that they foresee an International Commission inspecting these areas?
